DECODE YOUR KITTEN'S TRIGGERS

- ☐ Decode Your Kitten's Triggers: Observe your kitten during three play sessions over two days and write down exactly what was happening before each bite, where on your body the bite landed, and what body language your kitten showed beforehand.
- ☐ Decode Your Kitten's Triggers: Identify which single bite trigger accounts for most of your kitten's attacks and prioritize fixing that specific trigger before addressing any others.
- ☐ Decode Your Kitten's Triggers: Review your own habits to find behaviors that activate your kitten's predatory instincts, such as wiggling fingers, letting him attack your hands, or using your hands as toys.
- ☐ Decode Your Kitten's Triggers: Stop wiggling your fingers or toes near your kitten immediately because quick, erratic movements trigger the hunting sequence that leads directly to biting attacks.

DRAIN ENERGY WITH PURPOSEFUL PLAY

- ☐ Drain Energy With Purposeful Play: Schedule multiple interactive play sessions throughout the day using wand toys to fully engage your kitten's hunting instincts and use up excess energy before it turns into biting.
- ☐ Drain Energy With Purposeful Play: Run a 5-minute energy audit by tracking when your kitten is most chaotic versus calm to identify the gaps in his daily schedule that need structured play sessions.
- ☐ Drain Energy With Purposeful Play: Use the hunting sequence technique by moving the wand toy in a pattern that mimics prey, letting your kitten complete the stalk-chase-pounce-catch sequence before the final capture.

☐

Drain Energy With Purposeful Play: End play sessions before your kitten becomes overstimulated because once arousal builds past a certain point, it overflows into biting regardless of how much energy has been burned.

REDIRECT AND REWIRE THE BEHAVIOR

- ☐ Redirect and Rewire the Behavior: When your kitten bites during play, immediately redirect his attention toward an appropriate toy by wiggling it nearby so he learns that teeth belong on toys, not on you.
 - ☐ Redirect and Rewire the Behavior: Keep wand toys and teaser toys in every room so you always have a proper outlet within arm's reach when your kitten starts nipping at your hands or feet.
 - ☐ Redirect and Rewire the Behavior: Freeze completely when your kitten bites unexpectedly instead of pulling away quickly, because rapid movement completes the predatory sequence and makes the biting worse.
 - ☐ Redirect and Rewire the Behavior: Set up a consistent daily play schedule that includes morning, afternoon, and evening sessions so your kitten has predictable energy outlets and biting becomes unnecessary.
